Dear Helen,

I am writing in relation to the above application, as I have noticed some objections and would like to address them, along with asking if you have any comments and/or questions on this site.

Regarding the health concerns, all applications are in full accordance with ICNIRP guidelines (an internationally and nationally government recognised organisation) and have an ICNIRP declaration submitted as part of the application. As stated, a declaration of ICNIRP compliance has been provided with the application documentation for this proposed radio base station and as such in line with code of practice and NPPF there is no requirement to consider health matters as part of this application.

Addressing concerns on potential negative impact on the value of the properties, despite the concerns of some homeowners that the value of their property may be reduced by a new telecommunications development, there is no hard evidence to suggest that this is the case. Property valuation is a complex process, involving many elements and an individual's choice of property is a highly subjective matter. Because by their nature radio base stations are low powered, they can only cover a limited geographical area. Base stations must be located where people want to use their phones – where they live, work and travel.

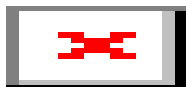

I would also like to ask if there were any comments from the Highways on the proposed location.

Kind regards
Michal
